

THE HIDDEN COST OF WEAK CYBERSECURITY

How UK Businesses Are Struggling

Lost Productivity & Downtime

IT failures don't just cause frustration—they cripple businesses.

UK companies lose up to 63% of productivity due to IT disruptions, with an average of 14 hours of downtime annually.

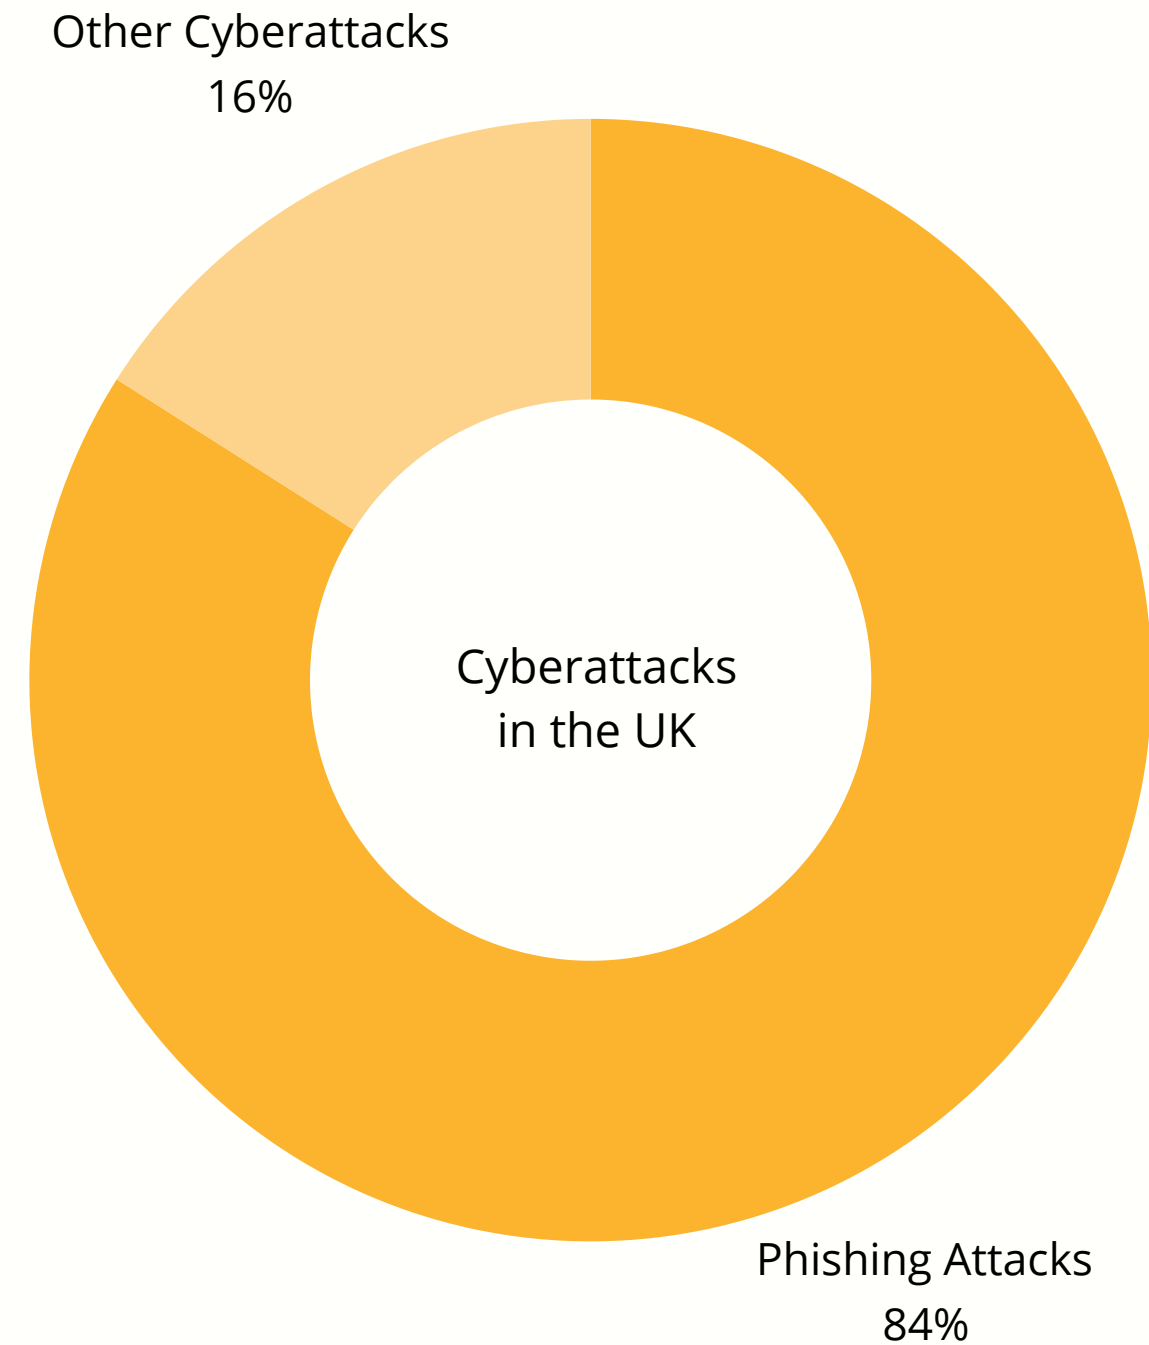

Every hour lost impacts revenue and efficiency.

Security Breaches & Data Loss

Cyber threats are a growing menace, with 50% of SMEs citing security as their biggest challenge.

Phishing alone accounts for 84% of cyberattacks, leading to severe data breaches.

Worse, 67% of companies without security monitoring fail to detect threats in time, leaving their systems exposed.

Financial & Legal Penalties

Ignoring cybersecurity can be costly—both legally and financially.

British Airways faced a £20 million fine for a cyber-attack, while Sellafield Ltd paid £332,500 for years of weak security.

Non-compliance with UK GDPR and NIS regulations can lead to severe penalties, damaging a company's reputation and finances.

Ransomware & Cyber Extortion

As cybercriminals demand ransoms, the UK government is considering a ban on ransom payments, making recovery even harder.

Yet, only 22% of businesses have an incident response plan, leaving most companies unprepared when an attack strikes.

Expensive IT Management

Cybersecurity isn't just about prevention—it requires skilled experts. Hiring an in-house IT team costs over £70,000 per employee per year, making it unaffordable for many SMEs.

Even large firms struggle—33% still rely on outdated IT systems, delaying digital transformation and increasing vulnerability.

In today's digital world, ignoring cybersecurity isn't an option. Businesses must invest in protection before it's too late.
